Who We Are

The NDCRC works to influence the design, implementation, expansion, and enhancement of treatment court programs through the development and dissemination of resources.

The National Drug Court Resource Center's (NDCRC) mission is to equip treatment court practitioners resources relevant to the field. Since October 2019, the NDCRC has been housed in the University of North Carolina Wilmington Social Science Applied Research Center (UNCW SSARC) in Wilmington, North Carolina. Our work focuses on disseminating the information needed to design and implement programs that align with best practice standards, expand and enhance court operations, as well as collect and analyze program data. NDCRC resources are featured on the website and include operational materials organized by court type, seminal readings for treatment court stakeholders, interactive map, calendar of professional development opportunities, moderated discussion board for all treatment court professionals, and more.

Who We Serve

The NDCRC is proud to host resources for stakeholders working in all treatment courts, including:

Adult Programs

- Drug Treatment
- Co-occurring Disorder
- DUI/DWI
- Family Treatment
- Mental Health/Wellness
- Opioid
- Re-entry
- Tribal Healing to Wellness
- Veterans Treatment

Juvenile Programs

- Drug Treatment
- Co-occurring Disorder
- Mental Health/Wellness
- Re-entry

What We Do

Disseminate. Collaborate.
Research. Create.

Disseminate.

One of the primary goals of the NDCRC is to ensure accurate and relevant information is available to treatment court practitioners, treatment providers, and other stakeholders.

- The Drug Court Review journal is distributed annually; topics and themes reflect areas of interest
- The NDCRC website houses a repository of sample operational documents and resources organized by court type
- Academic and scientific research and journal articles can be accessed at ndcrc.org
- NDCRC.org maintains a calendar of events including state conferences, grant deadlines, training opportunities, and webinars

Collaborate.

The NDCRC is a member of the Bureau of Justice Assistance (BJA) Training and Technical Assistance Collaborative which also includes the Center for Court Innovation, National Association of Drug Court Professionals, and the Tribal Law and Policy Institute. Together, the Collaborative works to develop and implement improved treatment court practices to increase effectiveness.

Research.

The NDCRC engages in research that answers questions relevant to practitioners, policymakers, funders, and researchers. Examples of research activities include:

- Painting the Current Picture monograph – biennial survey of treatment courts across the U.S. and territories
- Tribal Healing to Wellness: Survey of the Field monograph – survey of tribal healing to wellness courts
- Interactive map of treatment courts and related data by state/territory and county

Create.

The NDCRC develops and distributes original digital content from ndcrc.org:

- Justice to Healing Podcast
- Webinars
- Newsletter (monthly)
- Blog
- Interactive Projects and Visualizations
